

Softfinity logo refresh — executive summary

Combining the Polaris north-star with the 30-year Softfinity mark · for review · ~2 min read

The brief: You liked the website's brand concept but not its logo. We're keeping the Softfinity name and your existing swoosh, and fusing it with the Polaris four-point star so the new site feels like your company — not a generic startup.

Why it works: Softfinity = "soft + infinity" — the swoosh stands for continuity and a 30-year partnership. Polaris = the north star — guidance and trust. Together the mark says a guiding star with an enduring orbit. Bonus: both brands already use almost the same warm gold (Softfinity amber #E8821E, Polaris gold #C6A15B), so they blend naturally.

Your original sources

Softfinity — current logo (30 years)

Polaris — the website's star mark

Three directions, nine options

A Keep Softfinity orange + charcoal

Safest — nothing about the brand changes, the star just sharpens it.

A1 Comet — star leads, swoosh trails

A2 Swirl bead — star as the dot

A3 Orbit line — star + underline sweep

B Blend both — gold star + orange swoosh

A refreshed bridge; gold full-stop nods to Polaris.

B1 Duotone comet — gold head, orange tail

B2 Gilded orbit — star circled by swoosh

B3 Swirl + gold bead — heritage swirl

C Lead with Polaris — black + gold, orange accent

Closest to the live site; orange survives as the accent.

C1 Native — matches the live site

C2 Stacked — favicon / app icon

C3 Badge — app icon / avatar

Recommendation: B1 (Duotone comet) is the strongest single mark — it physically merges both logos (Polaris star = head, Softfinity swoosh = tail) and uses both golds at once; it works on the dark site and on white letterhead. Use C2 (Stacked) as the favicon/app icon. If you'd prefer the least change from today's brand, lead with A1 and keep everything orange.

Note: the swoosh shown is a close approximation drawn from your original logo. Once you pick a direction, the real swoosh will be vector-traced from the original artwork and delivered as production SVG + PNG + favicon. — Concept exploration for Softfinity Consulting (Pty) Ltd.
